ABSTRACT

A system and method for displaying content in a browser window associated with an end-user is described. In one embodiment, content that corresponds to a navigation location is retrieved. This content includes an embedded navigation link that can be extracted and encoded. Next, the embedded navigation link can be replaced by the encoded navigation link. Finally, the retrieved content, including the encoded navigation link, can be provided to the browser.